lease or $132,000 if the trailers were purchased.
Dr. Donald E. Wilson told the group an expenditure of that amount would be "uneconomical," since the district will have 10 trailers available when the new Sam Levy and Grace Wright Schools are completed.

The opening of the Levy School, he added, will eliminate double sessions at Hickory School.

MRS. KENNETH E. Watts said double sessions are a nuisance, but assured parents their youngsters "will not be hurt." Mrs. Watts said actual class time in a double session arrangement is only 10 minutes less than a full-day session.

Mrs. Watts also told Katz the high reserve will be needed if a Nov. 8 bond issue fails. She said the district's building fund is over-committed by $650,000 and those monies will have to be paid out of the general fund surplus if bonds fail.

Katz said the $650,000 "is still only two-thirds of the excess reserve," then added, "The people who tried to get the bond issue through are the ones who are going to be hurt."

"SOME OF US," he continued, "have come to believe that double sessions might merely be a device to oblige us to vote the bond issue in November."

Dr. Wilson told Katz the board had no thought of penalizing parents for failure to approve the last bond issue. "We looked at all sides," he said, "and all in all, this (double sessions) is the best choice."

Bert Lynn blamed double sessions at Hickory School on "administrative bungling." He said a "three-month mistake" had been made in planning for the Levy School, which will eliminate the double sessions at Hickory School.

"I AM NOT going to compound a mistake," Lynn said. He said he would press for early completion of at least

Hahn Plan Would Solve County's Unemployment

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has urged poverty chief Sargeant Shriver to fully utilize all private industry in Los Angeles County in the training of unskilled workers.

The Supervisor suggests these trainees be paid directly from anti-poverty funds channeled through the private firm at which they will work.

Hahn wrote Shriver: "To eliminate poverty in our country within the 10-year goal you have recommended, the full cooperation and participation of business enterprises in all counties throughout the United States is absolutely essential. The major problem of social and political unrest in the United States is unemployment. Although the percentage of unemployment in Los Angeles County is but 4.9 per cent, in certain areas it is as high as 25 per cent.

"Jobs must be found for these 149,000 unemployed people."
The Supervisor noted that in Los Angeles County there are 130,000 private businesses which employ one or more persons.

Supervisor Hahn requested Shriver to immediately seek the cooperation of the 130,000 business owners in Los Angeles County and urge them to participate in a massive program to retain the unemployed in private enterprise rather than "make work" public programs.

"If each enterprise were to take at least one person into their employ for one year, we would solve this (149,000 jobless) problem. The trainee should be paid out of anti-poverty funds at no expense to the businessman and the amount paid should be at least equal to the present minimum salary established as a poverty level, $4,000 per year."

Hahn cited reports that it costs approximately $9,700 per year for a poverty program to retain a worker at present.

"The method I propose," he said, "would cost only $4,000 a year. Since many of these trained in the program would be hired by the companies after training, the businesses, the workers and our whole community will benefit."

The present practice in the poverty program to pay an individual $330 per month without "opportunity or obligation to work or for just assigning him to busy work" sets the stage for just another type of welfare program, Hahn added.

$5,000 for Santa Fe Improvement

An allocation of $5,000 has been approved by the County Board of Supervisors for a highway improvement project on Santa Fe Avenue, north of Carson Street south of Santa Fe Avenue, according to Supervisor Burton W. Chace, Chairman of the Board.

The work will consist of constructing asphaltic concrete pavement on aggregate base material to join with the recent improvements constructed under county permit by the owners of the adjacent properties.

Supervisor Chace said that the proposed project is a good example of the type of road improvement work performed by the County Road Department in cooperation with the public for the betterment of the County highway system.

"The completed over-all project," Supervisor Chace added, "will reduce maintenance costs, improve a drainage."

Construction Code Seen Standard Public Works

A standard, uniform code of specifications for public works construction will soon become effective in the Southern California building industry, Supervisor Burton W. Chace announced today.

Los Angeles County Supervisors have adopted the specifications, subject to approval by the County Counsel.

"The Board of Supervisors has continuously encouraged the unification and modernization of public works specifications," Chace said. The fourth district supervisor also is Board Chairman.

"Uniform specifications are beneficial to contractors and to the public," he said.

The specifications were developed by a joint committee of the American Public Works Association and the Associated General Contractors. The specifications reflect the latest thinking and incorporate the most up-to-date construction methods, Chace said.

In addition to the APWAGC Committee, many government agencies, firms, county tractors and individuals associated with Southland construction contributed to the development of the specifications.

"The adoption of the standard specifications could save public agencies and taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars every year," Chace said.

The specifications will standardize general terminology, definitions, scope and control of work, responsibilities of contractors and public agencies, Chace said.

The public agencies which will make use of the new specifications first include County Road Department, the County Flood Control District, the County Engineer and various cities within the County.
